Your recommender needs to provide glimpses into your character – are you resilient? Empathetic? materials:

Harvard Business School Recommendation Questions: Unlocking the Secrets to a Stellar Application

Applying to Harvard Business School (HBS) is a monumental undertaking. It's a journey that demands meticulous planning, rigorous self-reflection, and, crucially, compelling recommendations. The HBS recommendation questions are not mere formalities; they are carefully crafted inquiries designed to delve deep into your character, capabilities, and potential impact. Understanding these questions and how to guide your recommenders is paramount to submitting a winning application. This comprehensive guide will break down the Harvard Business School recommendation questions, offering insights into what the admissions committee is truly looking for. We'll explore strategies for selecting the right recommenders and provide actionable advice on how to help them craft powerful responses that will elevate your application.

Why Are HBS Recommendation Questions So Important?

Harvard Business School prides itself on admitting individuals who not only possess exceptional academic and professional achievements but also demonstrate strong leadership potential, a commitment to community, and the capacity to influence others positively. The recommendation letters are your opportunity to have trusted individuals vouch for these qualities. Unlike many other MBA programs, HBS uses a specific set of questions for recommenders. This standardized approach allows for a more direct comparison across applicants and ensures that the admissions committee receives consistent, focused information. These questions are designed to move beyond superficial praise and elicit concrete examples and insightful evaluations. They aim to:

- Validate your claims: Recommendations provide an external perspective that supports the narrative you present in your essays and resume.
- Assess your leadership and teamwork skills: HBS is deeply invested in identifying future leaders. Recommendations offer firsthand accounts of your interactions and impact within teams and organizations.
- Evaluate your character and integrity: Admissions officers want to understand your ethical compass and how you conduct yourself, especially under pressure.
- Gauge your potential for future success: Recommendations help paint a picture of your trajectory and how you might contribute to the HBS community and beyond.

The Core Harvard Business School Recommendation Questions (and What They Mean)

HBS typically asks recommenders three core questions. While the exact wording might evolve slightly year to year, the underlying intent remains consistent. Let's break them down:

1. How do you know this candidate and for how long?

This is the foundational question. It establishes the context for the recommendation and the recommender's ability to provide an informed opinion.

- What HBS is looking for: They want to ensure your recommender has a genuine and sufficiently long-standing relationship with you to speak authoritatively about your professional capabilities and personal attributes. A recommender who has supervised you closely for several years will offer a much richer perspective than someone who only knows you casually or for a short period.
- Keywords and LSI Keywords to Consider: Relationship, duration, supervision, mentorship, direct observation, context, professional history, capacity to assess.
- How to Guide Your Recommender:
- Choose Wisely: Select someone who has directly observed your work, ideally your direct manager or a senior colleague who has collaborated closely with you on significant projects.
- Provide Context: Remind your recommender of the specific projects you worked on together, your roles, and the duration of your professional relationship. Share your resume and a brief overview of your career progression.
- Be Specific: If the relationship is a bit more nuanced (e.g., a mentor you met through a professional organization), help them articulate the nature and depth of your interactions.

2. Please discuss the candidate's potential to develop and contribute to the HBS community.

This is arguably the most critical question. It probes your readiness for the rigorous academic environment of HBS and your potential to enrich the lives of your classmates and the broader institution.

- What HBS is looking for: They want to see evidence that you are not only academically capable but also intellectually curious, collaborative, and willing to challenge yourself and others. They are looking for individuals who will be active participants in classroom discussions, contribute to study groups, and engage in extracurricular activities. This question assesses your self-awareness, your ability to learn from others, and your potential to be a future leader and alumnus.
- Keywords and LSI Keywords to Discuss your ability to handle disagreements constructively and learn from diverse perspectives. * Showcase Leadership Potential:  Even if you haven't held formal leadership titles, highlight instances where you've taken initiative, influenced others, or driven projects forward. Think about informal leadership roles. * Discuss Your "Why HBS":  Help your recommender connect your aspirations with HBS's mission. How do you see yourself contributing to the HBS community specifically? What are your post-MBA goals and how will HBS help you achieve them?

3. Please provide an example of a time when the candidate has exceeded expectations.

This question seeks concrete evidence of your exceptional performance and your ability to go above and beyond what is asked. * What HBS is looking for:  They want to see a specific, detailed story that demonstrates your initiative, problem-solving skills, dedication, and the positive impact of your actions. Generic statements won't suffice. The recommender needs to illustrate a situation where you didn't just meet requirements but significantly surpassed them. This often involves taking on extra responsibility, overcoming unforeseen challenges, or delivering outstanding results. * Keywords and LSI Keywords to Consider:  Exceeding expectations, initiative, problem-solving, dedication, impact, results, outstanding performance, going the extra mile, overcoming obstacles, quantifiable achievements, tangible outcomes. * How to Guide Your Recommender: * Brainstorm with Your Recommender:  Think of specific projects or situations where you truly shone. What was the situation? What was your task? What specific actions did you take? What was the quantifiable or qualitative result of your actions, and how did it exceed expectations? * Focus on Impact:  The most powerful examples demonstrate a clear and significant impact on the team, project, or organization. Quantifiable results (e.g., increased revenue, reduced costs, improved efficiency) are particularly compelling. * Highlight Unique Skills:  Connect the example to specific skills or qualities that are valuable at HBS, such as critical thinking, resilience, or innovation.

Additional Considerations for Your HBS Recommendations

Beyond the core questions, there are other elements that contribute to a strong recommendation letter:

Choosing the Right Recommenders

This is a crucial step. Not just anyone can write a powerful recommendation for you. * Direct Supervisors:  Ideally, one of your recommenders should be your current direct supervisor. They have the most insight into your day-to-day performance, your growth, and your potential. * Senior Colleagues/Mentors:  If your direct supervisor is not an option, consider a senior colleague or a mentor who has worked closely with you and can speak to your capabilities. * Quantifiable Achievements:  Look for individuals who can speak to your quantifiable achievements and the impact you've made. * Positive Relationships:  Choose individuals who have a positive and respectful opinion of you and are willing to advocate for you enthusiastically. * Avoid:  Family members, personal friends, or individuals who don't know your professional work well.

Preparing Your Recommenders

Think of your recommenders as your partners in the application process. The more information and guidance you provide, the better their recommendations will be. * Request Early: Give your recommenders ample time to write a thoughtful letter. At least 3-4 weeks is ideal. * Provide a "Brag Sheet": This is a document outlining your resume, a brief summary of your career goals, your HBS essays (if drafted), and specific examples of achievements or qualities you'd like them to highlight. This helps them tailor their response to what HBS is looking for. * Clarify HBS's Focus: Briefly explain what HBS values (e.g., leadership, impact, intellectual curiosity, community). * Offer to Meet: A brief conversation can help refresh their memory and ensure you're on the same page. * Respect Their Time: Understand that they are doing you a favor. Thank them profusely and keep them updated on your application status.

The Unseen Questions: What Else HBS Looks For

While not explicitly stated, the admissions committee is also evaluating: * Authenticity: Does the recommendation sound genuine and reflect the real person they know? * Enthusiasm: Is the recommender truly excited about your potential? * Fit with HBS Culture: Does the recommender articulate how you would thrive in and contribute to the unique HBS environment? * Potential for Growth: Does the recommendation highlight your capacity to learn and evolve?

Common Pitfalls to Avoid in HBS Recommendations

* Generic Letters: Recommendations that could be written for any applicant without specific details are detrimental. * Over-Emphasis on Technical Skills: While important, HBS is looking for more than just technical prowess. They want to see leadership and interpersonal skills. * Lack of Specific Examples: Vague praise is weak. Concrete examples are powerful. * Recommender Who Doesn't Know You Well: This will be apparent to the admissions committee. * Negative or Lukewarm Feedback: If a recommender isn't wholeheartedly supportive, it's better to find someone else.

Conclusion

The Harvard Business School recommendation questions are a vital component of your application. By understanding what HBS is seeking and by strategically preparing your recommenders, you can ensure your letters provide powerful, persuasive insights into your potential. Remember, these recommendations are not just about your past achievements; they are about your future impact. Invest the time and effort to make them count, and you'll be well on your way to presenting a truly compelling case for admission.

Understanding Harvard Business School's Recommended Questions: A Strategic Guide for Aspiring Leaders

Harvard Business School (HBS) is globally recognized not only for its rigorous academic programs but also for its intentional approach to shaping future leaders through carefully crafted selection instruments—among them, its renowned recommendation questions. These questions are far more than routine prompts; they serve as a strategic lens through which applicants reveal their leadership mindset, personal growth, ethical reasoning, and real-world impact. Understanding the purpose and nuances of these questions is essential for crafting responses that resonate with HBS's values and elevate an application from competent to compelling.

The Purpose Behind HBS's Recommendation Framework

At its core, HBS's recommendation questions are designed to uncover qualities that traditional metrics often miss—qualities such as resilience under pressure, emotional intelligence, collaborative problem-solving, and authentic leadership. Rather than asking about achievements alone, HBS seeks narratives that illustrate character, initiative, and the ability to learn from experience. These questions invite applicants to reflect deeply on pivotal moments that shaped their professional identity, offering admissions committees rich, qualitative insights. By focusing on self-awareness and behavioral storytelling, the questions help HBS identify candidates who not only excel intellectually but also contribute meaningfully to its dynamic learning community.

Key Insights: What Makes These Questions Unique

What sets HBS's recommendation questions apart is their emphasis on depth over breadth. Unlike generic prompts, HBS asks candidates to explore specific instances where they demonstrated initiative, navigated conflict, or drove change—often in environments marked by uncertainty or complexity. These prompts are intentionally open-ended, encouraging applicants to weave personal anecdotes into broader professional reflections. The questions are crafted to elicit genuine, unfiltered voices, avoiding formulaic answers. This approach ensures that the responses are not just polished but profoundly authentic, revealing not only what candidates did but how they think, feel, and grow through experience.

Strategic Applications: Aligning Your Narrative with HBS Values

Successfully addressing HBS's recommendation questions requires more than memorization—it demands strategic alignment with the school's core values: leadership, innovation, collaboration, and a commitment to impact. Applicants should reflect on moments where they demonstrated these traits, whether through mentoring a team, resolving a critical challenge, or fostering inclusive decision-making. The goal is to craft a narrative that connects personal growth with broader organizational or societal contributions. By mapping specific experiences to HBS's mission, applicants transform personal stories into compelling proof of leadership readiness. This alignment not only strengthens the application but also signals a genuine cultural fit.

Benefits of Mastering the Harvard Business School Recommended Questions

Engaging deeply with these recommended questions delivers lasting benefits beyond the admissions process. The reflective practice hones self-awareness, sharpens communication skills, and builds confidence in articulating one's story with clarity and conviction. These lessons extend into professional life, equipping leaders to navigate complex scenarios with emotional intelligence and strategic insight. Moreover, the ability to construct meaningful, values-driven narratives enhances leadership presence and influence in the workplace. In essence, mastering these questions is an investment in lifelong professional development, cultivating a mindset of intentional growth and impact.

The Future of Leadership Assessment at HBS

As business environments grow increasingly dynamic and interconnected, HBS continues to evolve its selection methods to capture the full spectrum of leadership potential. Future iterations of recommendation questions are likely to emphasize adaptability, ethical judgment in ambiguous contexts, and the capacity to lead diverse teams across global settings. By staying attuned to these shifting demands, HBS aims to recruit leaders who not only succeed in today's challenges but also shape the future of responsible, inclusive, and transformative business practices. Candidates who embrace this evolution—by reflecting with authenticity and strategic foresight—will position themselves at the forefront of next-generation leadership. In navigating Harvard Business School's recommended questions with depth, honesty, and strategic insight, applicants do more than answer— they reveal the kind of leader HBS seeks to cultivate: one ready to lead with purpose, inspire with action, and innovate with integrity.

This in-depth analysis will delve into the intricacies of HBS recommendation questions, providing aspiring applicants with the knowledge and strategies to empower their recommenders and present their strongest possible case. Understanding what HBS is truly looking for is the first step in crafting a compelling narrative that resonates with the Admissions Committee.

Why Recommendations Matter at HBS: Beyond the Resume

In a sea of highly qualified candidates, what truly sets individuals apart? Harvard Business School's philosophy is rooted in identifying individuals with the potential to shape business and society. While your academic achievements and professional accomplishments are important, they only tell part of the story. Recommendations provide crucial qualitative data that validates your quantitative achievements and offers a glimpse into your character, leadership potential, and interpersonal skills – the very qualities that HBS prioritizes.

The HBS Perspective: What They Seek

The HBS Admissions Committee isn't just looking for individuals who have excelled; they're seeking future leaders who are collaborative, analytical, influential, and possess a strong ethical compass. They want to understand:

1. Your impact: How have you demonstrably influenced your team, organization, or projects?
2. Your potential: What is your capacity for growth and future leadership?
3. Your character: Are you a person of integrity, self-awareness, and resilience?
4. Your fit: How will you contribute to the HBS community and beyond?

Recommendation letters are critical for answering these questions, offering objective assessments from those who have witnessed your professional journey firsthand. They provide context, credibility, and a nuanced understanding that your own essays cannot fully convey.

The Role of the Recommender

Your recommenders are your advocates. They are entrusted with providing an honest and detailed evaluation of your strengths and areas for development. A strong recommendation letter will not only highlight your achievements but also offer specific anecdotes that illustrate your abilities. Conversely, a generic or lukewarm recommendation can be detrimental to your application.

Deconstructing the Harvard Business School Recommendation Questions: A Deep Dive

Harvard Business School employs a unique and highly effective set of recommendation questions. Unlike many other business schools that rely on a single essay, HBS uses a series of structured prompts designed to elicit detailed and comparative feedback. These questions are not about simply stating your accomplishments; they are about demonstrating them through concrete examples and comparative analysis.

The Core Questions: What Your Recommenders Will Face

While the exact wording can be subject to minor updates, the core of the HBS recommendation questions typically revolves around the following key areas:

1. "In what aspects, in your judgment, has [Applicant Name] exceeded the expectations of the person in a similar role?"

This is arguably the most critical question. It forces your recommender to go beyond simply stating you are good and instead requires them to quantify and qualify your performance relative to peers. This is where specific examples are paramount. A strong answer will involve comparisons, illustrating how you have gone above and beyond in specific situations. Think about:

1. Instances where you took initiative beyond your defined role.
2. Projects where you delivered exceptional results that surprised stakeholders.
3. Situations where you demonstrated leadership or problem-solving skills that significantly benefited the team or company.

Keywords: exceeded expectations HBS, comparative assessment MBA, performance benchmarks business school.

2. "Please provide specific examples of academic and/or professional accomplishments that best illustrate [Applicant Name]'s qualifications for our program. Please also describe any areas where you believe [Applicant Name] needs to develop further."

This question serves two vital purposes. First, it seeks concrete evidence of your capabilities, mirroring the analytical rigor expected at HBS. Second, it probes your self-awareness and your recommender's perception of your areas for growth. This is not a place to shy away from mentioning development areas; in fact, a thoughtful discussion of areas for improvement, coupled with strategies for addressing them, demonstrates maturity and a commitment to continuous learning.

1. Accomplishments: Focus on quantifiable achievements and specific skills demonstrated. Did you lead a successful product launch? Did you implement a cost-saving measure that yielded significant results?
2. Development Areas: Encourage your recommender to be honest but constructive. Perhaps you could develop your public speaking skills or delegate more effectively. The key is to frame these as opportunities for growth that you are actively working on.

Keywords: MBA application accomplishments, recommendation letter development areas, professional qualifications business school.

3. "Please describe [Applicant Name]'s leadership potential. Give an example of a time when [Applicant Name] demonstrated leadership."

Leadership is at the core of the HBS mission. This question aims to understand your ability to influence, motivate, and guide others. HBS values diverse forms of leadership, not just formal management positions. It can be leading a project team, taking charge during a crisis, mentoring junior colleagues, or driving change within an organization.

1. Qualities of Leadership: Does your recommender see you as someone who inspires others, makes difficult decisions, takes responsibility, or fosters collaboration?
2. Specific Examples: A compelling example will clearly outline the situation, your actions, and the positive outcome achieved through your leadership.

Keywords: leadership potential MBA, HBS recommendation leadership examples, demonstrated leadership skills.

4. "Please describe [Applicant Name]'s interpersonal skills. Give an example of a time when [Applicant Name] demonstrated effective interpersonal skills."

Collaboration and communication are essential in the fast-paced, team-oriented environment of HBS and the business world. This question assesses your ability to work effectively with others, build relationships, and communicate your ideas clearly and persuasively. This includes active listening, empathy, conflict resolution, and the ability to work with diverse personalities.

1. Examples of Collaboration: Highlight situations where you successfully navigated team dynamics, resolved conflicts, or built consensus.
2. Communication Effectiveness: Did you effectively present complex information, influence stakeholders, or build rapport with clients?

Keywords: interpersonal skills MBA, collaboration and communication business school, teamwork in recommendations.

5. "Please reflect on your interactions with [Applicant Name]. How has your perception of their character and values evolved over time?"

This question seeks to understand your integrity, self-awareness, and how you navigate ethical dilemmas. It's about your character, your values, and your growth as an individual. This allows the recommender to speak to your authenticity and how your actions align with your stated values. It also offers an opportunity for them to share how they've seen you mature and develop professionally and personally.

1. Values and Integrity: Does your recommender see you as honest, ethical, and reliable?
2. Personal Growth: How have you demonstrated maturity, resilience, and a commitment to personal and professional development?

Keywords: character assessment MBA, values and ethics business school, personal growth in recommendations.

Strategies for Empowering Your Recommenders

Your recommenders are busy professionals. To ensure they can provide the most impactful and insightful feedback, it's your responsibility to equip them with the necessary tools and context. This proactive approach is crucial for a successful HBS application.

Choosing the Right Recommenders

The choice of recommenders is paramount. HBS prefers recommenders who know you well and can speak to your abilities in detail. Ideally, these should be supervisors or individuals who have directly managed your work and witnessed your professional development. Avoid recommending individuals who have limited interaction with you or who might provide generic feedback.

1. Direct Supervisors: Your current or former manager is usually the strongest choice.
2. Senior Colleagues/Mentors: Individuals who have overseen significant projects you've led or been a part of.
3. Avoid: Friends, family members, or individuals who don't have a strong professional relationship with you.

Preparing Your Recommender Packet

To assist your recommenders, provide them with a comprehensive packet that includes:

1. Your Resume: A clear and concise overview of your professional experience and achievements.
2. Your Essays (Drafts): This helps them understand your personal narrative and the key themes you are highlighting.
3. A "Brag Sheet" or "Recommender Guide": This is a document you create that outlines specific accomplishments, projects, skills, and anecdotes you'd like them to highlight. Be specific and remind them of key contributions you made.
4. A Reminder of the HBS Questions: Clearly list out the recommendation questions and provide bullet points of how you'd like them to address each one, with specific examples.
5. Deadline Information: Clearly communicate the submission deadline and any instructions for submitting the recommendation.
6. A Thank You Note: Express your gratitude for their time and effort.

Keywords: MBA recommender guide, how to prepare recommendation letters, choosing MBA recommenders.

The Art of the Conversation

Schedule a meeting or a detailed call with your recommenders to discuss your goals and aspirations for HBS. This conversation allows you to:

1. Reiterate why you are applying to HBS and what you hope to gain.
2. Discuss the specific skills and qualities HBS is looking for.
3. Remind them of key projects and achievements that showcase these qualities.
4. Seek their honest feedback on your strengths and areas for development.

It's a collaborative process, and your open communication will lead to a more tailored and effective recommendation.

Common Pitfalls to Avoid in HBS Recommendations

Even with the best intentions, applicants and their recommenders can fall into common traps that can undermine the strength of an application. Awareness of these pitfalls is key to avoiding them.

Generic Praise vs. Specific Examples

The most significant pitfall is a recommendation filled with vague praise. Phrases like "She's a great team player" or "He's a hard worker" are meaningless without concrete examples. HBS wants to see how you are a great team player, not just be told it. Your recommender must illustrate your skills with specific anecdotes.

Overemphasis on Weaknesses

While acknowledging development areas is important, an overemphasis on weaknesses can paint a negative picture. The recommender should frame these as opportunities for growth and highlight how you are actively working on them. The overall tone should remain positive and highlight your potential.

Lack of Comparative Analysis

Failing to compare your performance to that of peers in similar roles is a missed opportunity. The "exceeded expectations" question is designed for this. Without comparative context, your achievements might seem ordinary.

"Too Good to Be True" Recommendations

While you want strong recommendations, excessively effusive or unbelievable praise can be counterproductive. Admissions committees are adept at spotting insincere recommendations. Honesty and authenticity are key.

Conclusion: The Power of a Well-Crafted Recommendation

The Harvard Business School recommendation questions are more than just a formality; they are a critical component of your application, providing invaluable insights into your character, leadership potential, and overall suitability for the HBS program. By understanding the purpose behind these questions, carefully selecting your recommenders, and proactively preparing them with the necessary information, you can significantly enhance the impact of your application.

Remember, your recommenders are your advocates. Investing time and effort in empowering them to provide detailed, specific, and compelling feedback is an investment in your own future at one of the world's most prestigious business schools. A strong recommendation, backed by concrete examples and insightful analysis, can be the differentiating factor that helps you unlock the gates of Harvard Business School.

When readers know they can return at any time, they feel less urgency to understand everything immediately. Ideas settle through repetition and reflection, leading to deeper comprehension. Global availability adds perspective. Readers from different regions engage with the same material, often bringing varied interpretations. This shared access broadens understanding and highlights the value of multiple viewpoints. Exploration becomes natural when effort is minimal. Readers venture beyond familiar subjects, connecting ideas across disciplines. This openness strengthens creativity and encourages critical thinking. Long-term engagement is supported by continuity. Notes saved today remain relevant tomorrow. Bookmarks placed months ago still guide attention. Learning evolves instead of resetting. Books take on a different role. They become resources that wait rather than demand. They remain present, ready to support new questions and changing interests. Over time, this steady availability shapes attitude. Learning feels approachable. Curiosity feels justified. Understanding feels earned through consistency rather than urgency. Accessing Harvard Business School Recommendation Questions in this way aligns with real-life rhythms. It respects limited time, varied attention, and changing priorities. Learning becomes something that accompanies daily life rather than competing with it. Rather than pushing toward a finish line, the experience encourages return. Each revisit brings new context and deeper insight. Familiar sections reveal new meaning as perspective shifts. Knowledge grows quietly through this process. There is no dramatic endpoint, only gradual accumulation. Ideas connect, understanding strengthens, and confidence develops naturally. In this space, learning does not announce itself. It unfolds through small choices, repeated engagement, and ongoing curiosity. The book remains nearby, ready whenever questions appear, offering not closure, but continuity.

Questions & Answers About harvard business school recommendation questions

1	What are the most common pitfalls to avoid when asking for an HBS recommendation?	The biggest pitfalls are asking too late, asking someone who doesn't know you well enough, or providing inadequate information. Ensure your recommender has ample time and specific examples to draw upon.
2	Should I ask my current direct manager for an HBS recommendation?	Generally, yes, especially if they are familiar with your strengths and contributions. However, if your manager is unaware of your aspirations or is not your strongest advocate, consider alternatives like a former manager or a senior colleague who can speak to your leadership potential.
3	How can I best prepare my recommender for writing a strong HBS recommendation?	Provide your recommender with your resume, essays, a clear understanding of why you're pursuing an MBA at HBS, and specific examples of your achievements that align with HBS's values and desired qualities. A 'cheat sheet' or summary of key points can be very helpful.
4	What kind of specific examples should I encourage my recommender to highlight?	Encourage them to focus on concrete examples demonstrating leadership, analytical skills, teamwork, impact on your organization, and your ability to overcome challenges. Quantifiable results are always impactful.
5	What if I can't get a recommendation from my direct supervisor?	If your direct supervisor isn't suitable or willing, opt for someone who has supervised your work closely and can offer specific insights into your capabilities, such as a project lead, a senior team member, or a former manager.
6	How much advance notice should I give my recommenders?	A minimum of 4-6 weeks is ideal. This allows them sufficient time to reflect, gather thoughts, and write a thoughtful, detailed letter without feeling rushed.
7	Can I ask someone from a different company or organization for a recommendation?	Yes, if they have directly supervised your work and can speak to your professional capabilities and leadership potential. This is often the case for consultants or project-based roles.
8	What if my recommender is not a native English speaker? Should I be concerned?	While HBS prefers strong writing, they understand recommendations come from diverse backgrounds. The content and substance of the recommendation are more critical than perfect prose. Ensure the core message is clear and impactful.
9	How important is the recommender's relationship with HBS?	While not the primary factor, if your recommender has a prior positive relationship with HBS (e.g., alumni, former faculty), it can add a slight layer of familiarity, but the quality of the recommendation is paramount.
10	What are the key qualities HBS looks for in recommenders?	HBS seeks recommenders who know the applicant intimately, can provide specific examples of their achievements, and can speak to their leadership potential, intellectual curiosity, and personal character.
